Fishing for surface feeding carp can be frustrating at the best of times with standard floats because they are too visible or have a poor hooking mechanism. The Bolt Bubble Pose is the first bubble float designed specifically for surface feeding carp. The streamlined pear-shaped design ensures that the weight is pushed forward to facilitate casting at long distances, while at the same time creating a pronounced fast movement.

The Bolt Bubbles sit low in the water and are extremely unobtrusive due to their translucency and very low profile. The casting weight is simply controlled by a pair of rubber grommets that are inserted into the surface of the float. These allow the float to be filled with the required amount of water for long distance casting or increased drag.

The float is mounted "in-line" which, in conjunction with the tapered sleeves at the front and back, guarantees excellent tangle-free casting. The hooklink swivel is pulled back into the rubber on the nose of the float and secured tightly - this results in excellent hooking properties and ensures that the hooklink can be released if it gets caught. The Bolt Bubbles are supplied with a pair of tapered sleeves that virtually eliminate tangling when slipped over the swivel eye.
