With the BESTIA Casting, Orient Rods is launching a new, standalone product line in the casting rod category. Drawing on over a decade of experience, state-of-the-art materials, and computer-aided simulation, the entire design concept of these rods has been redefined to achieve maximum casting performance under extreme loads.

Through targeted structural modifications to the blank, the maximum stresses during the cast are distributed across different zones of the rod. This alters the overall structure of the blank and enables significantly more efficient energy transfer under maximum load. In addition, a system has been developed that increases the blank’s elasticity by up to 30%—with only minimal added weight. This concept allows for a noticeable increase in casting performance and simultaneously lays the foundation for future custom-tuned rods, tailored to the physical characteristics of the individual angler or competitive athlete.
