The Pear Lead can be cast very far, almost as far as the Distance Casting Lead. It is also less susceptible to crosswinds due to its very compact shape. This makes the Pear Lead suitable for almost all situations where you want to push your personal long-casting abilities to the limit.
The compact shape is an advantage on muddy ground. If you use a light Pear Lead with only 1oz or 2oz and let the lead sink into the mud, the carp will strike against a strong resistance when you pull it off. This means that the self-hooking effect with a pear lead that has sunk into the mud is as good as with heavier leads.

Because the Pear Lead has a large and round bend, you can feel its impact on the bottom of the water better than with slim leads.

The Pear Lead is excellent for fishing with the Solidz PVA bags because its shape allows it to sit well in one of the two corners at the bottom of the PVA bag. This shifts the center of gravity of the PVA bag to the front and thus enables greater precision when casting.
